

Switch and the Bots were surprised to see how low their violum levels had become.

Switch knew that violum crystals vibrate at their own unique frequency...

... she just needed a way to listen for that frequency.

Ruby took off and headed out across the planet. It wasn't long before Switch's device began picking up traces of violum buried beneath the sand.